Overview

Nestled in the Watchung Mountains, New Providence is home to 13,650 residents within 3.6 square miles in northwestern Union County. Known for our beautiful residential neighborhoods, excellent school system, and wonderful businesses. New Providence is a combination of the new and the old, where contemporary living is seasoned by a heritage from earlier days. Here modern buildings coexist with vintage dwellings from colonial and Victorian times to form an architectural collage.

New Providence is conveniently located roughly 15 miles west of Newark and approximately 28 miles west of New York City. Traveling is simple and convenient with two easily accessible train stations within New Providence and our proximity to I-78, the Garden State Parkway, New Jersey Turnpike and Newark Liberty International Airport.

History of New Providence

New Providence lies on the slope between the heights of Stony Hill at Mountain Avenue and the meandering Passaic River below. Indians of the Lenni Lenape tribe were the first known inhabitants of this region. The history of New Providence can be first traced back to 1664 when James, Duke of York and brother to King Charles II, purchased the land from these Native Americans. The territory purchased was quite large and included the land where New Providence, Berkeley Heights and Summit, as well as several other communities, are now located.

The first settlers were a Puritan colony that came to the area in 1720. The abundance of large flocks of wild turkeys led to the initial name for the area of Turkey. From 1736 – 1738 many families were buying land near the Passaic River. Before long, these settlers had established homes and built a Presbyterian Church, which became the center of life in the small settlement. Local history is interwoven with the Presbyterian Church because of an accident that took place there in 1778. A partially completed gallery gave way during a meeting and fell on the people seated below. No one was seriously injured, and the survivors attributed this to Divine Providence. In gratitude, the residents changed the name of the settlement from Turkey to New Providence, which included present-day Summit and Berkeley Heights.

New Providence contributed men to the Revolutionary cause, but its soil remained unscathed by battle. Forty-eight men who served in Washington's army are buried in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

In 1869 Summit seceded from New Providence Township over disagreement with town management, as well as its rapid increase in population and businesses due to its railroad facilities. New Providence Borough was formed in 1899 and present-day Berkeley Heights retained the name New Providence Township until 1952.

Government

Local Government

New Providence has been governed by a mayor and council since it was incorporated as an independent, self-governing municipality on March 14, 1899. To strengthen the executive arm of borough government, the position of borough administrator was created by local ordinance in 1962.

The local government provides services for the residents, and in turn collects taxes which pay for those services. Portions of the tax also go to the county and public schools. The schools are administered independently of the borough government by an elected board of education.

The municipal services include planning and zoning, police protection, public health and welfare, road maintenance, garbage and recycling collection, sewage and storm drainage systems, the public library, and recreational parks and facilities.

Volunteer groups who operate under governmental direction give fire protection, ambulance service, and disaster relief. Private utilities are responsible for furnishing gas, water, electricity, and transportation.

The Municipal Center, located at 360 Elkwood Avenue, houses the borough administrative offices, including the Borough Administrator, Borough Clerk, Tax Collector, Tax Assessor, Engineering Department, and Building Department, as well as the Borough Nurse, Recreation Department, Municipal Court, and Police Department. The Board of Education is also located within the building.

Additional information regarding Department of Public Works (DPW) services and recycling can be found on the borough website at www.newprov.us

Federal, State, and County Representation

New Providence is in the Seventh Congressional District and is part of New Jersey's 21st Legislative District.

New Jersey's Seventh Congressional District covers portions of Hunterdon County, Middlesex County, Somerset County and Union County. Information regarding the current Seventh Congressional District representatives can be found at www.congress.gov. New Jersey's 21st Legislative District covers portions of Morris, Somerset, and Union Counties. Information regarding representation in the 21st Legislative District can be found at www.senate.gov.

Information about the current Governor of New Jersey can be found at www.nj.gov.

Union County is governed by the nine-member Union County Board of County Commissioners, elected at-large to three-year terms on a staggered basis. The county government is responsible for the construction and maintenance of county roads and bridges and the operation of a county jail. It may operate many programs, such as police and fire training academies and emergency services, maintain park and recreation systems, administer programs for special groups, and usually assumes public health functions. Information about the Union County Board of County Commissioners can be found at <https://ucnj.org/commissioners/>.

Education

New Providence enjoys a long tradition of educational excellence, with an ongoing commitment to academics, the arts, athletics, community service, and character education. The school district has earned recognition at the national, state, county, and local levels for the achievements of students and staff. Student assessment scores remain among the highest in the area.

In partnership with students, teachers, parents and community, the mission of the New Providence School District is to prepare our students academically for their pursuits, to develop the appropriate social and emotional skills to be productive, empathetic, global citizens, and to stimulate a growth mindset for continued, life-long learning in a culturally diverse society.

Offering a comprehensive Pre-K to Grade 12 educational program, the district serves a high school, middle school, and two elementary schools. Programs of study are carefully aligned to the New Jersey Student Learning Standards, with a strong emphasis on technology integration. Co-curricular activities offer all students many opportunities to meet their needs and interests. Participation in a well-rounded curriculum is encouraged.

Our schools are staffed with dedicated and highly qualified professionals who work closely with parents to ensure safe and caring environments. Our ongoing, district-wide character education program continues to focus on developing responsible, respectful, caring, and informed citizens who are equipped to become the 21st century leaders.

Supportive services are available through the Department of Educational Services and the Department of Special Services. These services include the Gifted and Talented, Basic Skills, and English as a Second Language programs, as well as reading specialists, speech/language specialists, occupational and physical therapists, guidance personnel, special education instructors, and a child study team.

There are two public K-6 schools, as well as one parochial elementary school. The middle school is adjacent to the high school and consists of grades 7-8. New Providence High School is consistently highly ranked by national surveys such as U.S. News & World Report.

Schools in the district are:

- Allen W. Roberts Elementary School (grades PK-6)
- Salt Brook School (K-6)
- New Providence Middle School (7&8) / New Providence High School (9-12): both schools share the same building and some of the same facilities (art rooms, auditorium, east wing, west wing, gyms, music rooms, TV production room, cafeteria).

New Providence also is home to a private school, Our Lady of Peace Catholic School.

New Providence is a well-educated community. For population 25 years and over:

High school or higher: 95.8%
Bachelor's degree or higher: 66.6%
Graduate or professional degree: 32.6%

New Providence Memorial Library

The New Providence Memorial Library was opened in 1921 and has greatly expanded over the years. The Memorial Library is home to over 70,000 volumes of books and reference materials, in addition to over 120 different periodicals, which it lends free of charge to any resident in town.

Founded by a citizens group in 1921, the library at first was supported by funds raised at card parties, food sales, movie benefits and dramatic productions. When it first opened, the library owned 15 books and borrowed 50 more. In 1942 the library became a municipal service maintained by funds appropriated by the Borough Council and supervised by a board of trustees appointed by the mayor with the approval of the council.

The oldest part of the present library building was completed in 1950 with the help of funds given by the townspeople as a memorial to the men of New Providence who died in World War II. A wing was added in 1958 and in 1966 two large additions quadrupled the space. The library underwent extensive renovations in 2005 and now offers comfortable reading and meeting rooms, wireless internet access, state-of-the-art reference tools, a children's library, art displays, reading groups, and a host of online resources. The library is located at 377 Elkwood Avenue, adjacent to the Municipal Center.

Transportation

Service on the New Jersey Transit Gladstone Branch of the Morris & Essex Lines is available at the New Providence and Murray Hill stations, offering service to Hoboken Terminal and to Penn Station in Midtown Manhattan. Transportation to New York City in less than one hour is easily accessible with scheduled buses and two train stations to downtown and mid-town New York. Two Gladstone Branch trains each weekday morning offer one-seat rides to Manhattan, and two evening trains leave New York and stop at both of New Providence's stations on the way to Gladstone. All other rail service is to or from Hoboken. These trains connect at Summit or Newark Broad Street with Manhattan-bound trains.

Lakeland Bus Lines offers weekday rush hour service from stops along Springfield Avenue to New York's Port Authority Bus Terminal.

Newark Liberty International Airport is approximately sixteen miles east of New Providence.
